From your Chief

As the holiday season is in full swing, I wanted to take this time to remind our residents about scams. I have watched the scammers become more and more sophisticated with the way they do business. Scammers use different ways to defraud you such as phone calls, emails, text message and simply walking up to your door step to retrieve a gift. Please be careful when answering a call, text or email and make sure you have a plan in place when packages are delivered. Please do your research on the company or person before you conduct any business with them.

If you sell products or items online make sure you retrieve the money before shipping. It's a good idea to verify the address over the internet first to make sure it is an actual address. We have had several residents report on being scammed and usually these people are out hundreds of dollars.

Lets make this holiday season all smiles, do not let someone else make this time memorable for all the wrong reasons.

Your Chief,

Shane Mikkelson
